A financial conflict of interest exists when an individual, or an institution, has external financial interests that have the potential to influence, or bias, their responsibilities to the University. The Conflict of Interest Office supports the University community in identifying and managing financial conflicts of interest related to research and scholarly activities, business transactions, and intellectual property.

Our mission is to support research and innovation at the University of Utah by protecting the integrity and scientific merit of our research community through effective management of financial conflicts of interest.

Conflicts of Interest, real or perceived, may manifest as: bias in research or academic work, improper influence over University subordinates or students, undue influence on research participants, inappropriate uses of University funds or property, and public allegations of unethical behavior. These situations can have the potential to damage the reputations of individuals and the University.

Conflict of Interest oversight provides protections to:

- Faculty
- Staff
- Students
- Researchers
- The University
- The Public
- Human Subjects
- Research Integrity